

Impressive Funeral Ceremonies Conducted Yesterday.

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES

NUMBERS OF FRIENDS HONOR DEAD MAN.

Speakers Eulogize His Life and Character-Members of the Council and City Officials Generally Were Present In a Body to Pay Tribute of Respect to Former Co-worker.

The funeral of Auditor Swan was held in the Fifteenth ward meeting house yesterday afternoon, the services being simple, but very impressive. Sor-row held its place in the large congrerow held its piace in the large congregation, and the remarks of the speakers could be classed only as one continual enlogy of the dead man. The city officials attended the funeral in a body, occupying several seats to the right of the hall and behind the mourners, who comprised both the families of Auditor Swan and his widow, formerly Mrs. Whittemore.

The remains were reviewed at the residence prior to, the services, and when placed in the meeting house the masket assumed the appearance of a beautiful garden of flowers, one of the prettess tributes being offered by the city officials. The meeting house was decorated in white, a painting of the resurrection in the forepart of the holl presenting a beautiful appearance with its drapings.

The services commenced by the ward choir singing the hymn, "O, Lord Re-sponsive to Thy Call." Invocation was offered by H. P. Richards, and the choir rendered "Come Ye to the Feast of Love"

A Man of Integrity.

Rodney Badger, counselor to Bishop Morgan, was the first speaker. He referred to his long acquaintance with the decoased, and from that association could characterize the departed as a man of honesty, sprightness and stern integrity to accomplish everything he undertook to do.

"George Swan was a big-hearted" integrity to accomplish everything he undertook to do.

"George Swan was a big-hearted man," said Mr. Badger. "He was responsive to any plea for aid, he always had a willing heart and a willing purse. But for a man of his uncommon intelligence he was backward. He would not put himself forward before his tellow man, hence his great usefulness to the community in which he lived. What can be said of George Swan can be said of but few. He never knowingly took advantage of his fellow to gain for himself. And honesty was but one of his noble traits."

Samuel Hills' remarks were of the doutrinal side of death. Speaking of the life of Auditor Swan, he said it was not with regret that he had looked upon the bereavement that had brought them together on this occasion. "George Swan will meet as many friends on the other side as knew him here." said he. "I can say so after reviewing his past, and reflecting that his earlier associates, who knew and toved him, have nearly all preceded him to the great beyond. May his family be as well prepared to face death as was he."

nearly all preceded him to the streat beyond. May his family be as well prepared to face death as was he."

W- Swan As Missionary.

John Nicholson recalled a number of incidents in the career of the deceased, whom he had known in 1853 as a missionary to Great Britain. The spenker paid this tribute to his memory. 'He was the most unjestic speaker in the ministry at this time. He held his hearers entranced and spread sunshins and light upon all who crossed his path. 'Like the Balance of us, he had his weaknesses. None of us are perfect, but there is an opening to all of us to that which is bright and beautiful. The opportunities of rectification are not confined to any man. And I expect to see Brother Swan again, after he and I have fully rectified ourselves in the spirit. Then i shall shake his hand and we will congraturate ourselves hat we are sharing those blessings.'

James Sharp spoke feelingily of the cid man as he had known him and of the pang his sudden demise had caused. 'Death is a strange thing,' he continued. 'It sometimes comes in a way that shocks us; again, it grieves us, but in this instance it came like the will-perlags of angels. Without a struggle did this spirit pass behind the vell. But this all of Brother Swan? No, I cannot believe it is. George Swan that was its George Swan that is and shall be. There was but one Brother Swan, and I can not be not of the real in the sun? No, there is more. And so it is with our departed brook of the sun? No, there is more. And so it is with our departed brook of the sun? A Natural Gentleman.

A Natural Gentleman.

Aposite George Teasdale spoke of the sun.'

A Natural Gentleman.

Apostic George Teasdale spoke of the deceased as a natural gentleman, having known him intimately in the mission field. He felt thankful at being one of those to pay last respects to his memory.

one of those to pay and respects to its memory.

Apostle John Henry Smith followed.

"George Swan," said he, "was an uncommon man—he had intellectual force and power, and was scholarly. He was not without his mistakes, but when I think over the past, it is a joy to me that I knew George Swan. The man who p seeses elements that give ckample to his fellows is always worthy of our respect. This man was truly one of the noblest works of God—an honest man."

of the noblest works of God-an houset man."

In closing, Apostic Smith referred to Auditor Swan's work in the church, having devoted his young manhood to the expounding of its principles.

"The honest and dignified form of George Swan," he concluded, "will appear before our Father when these lowers are gathered."

The services closed by the choir singing "Mourn Not For Those Who Fearsfully Lay Their Bodies Down," and benediction was pronounced by John Sharp.
